

Environmental, Health and Safety Management Program

What is an Environmental, Health and Safety Management Program?

Are you a facilities or production manager who also has to wear the environmental manager's hat? Are you an environmental, safety and health manager who has a mountain of tasks to complete? Are you competing with other companies who have established successful environmental management systems? Have you historically only used an environmental consultant for a specific project or just to audit your facility for compliance issues?

Perhaps you should consider our Environmental, Health and Safety Management Program (EHSMP) Services, which include regularly scheduled site visits where CAPACCIO staff become part of your environmental, health and safety team. These services allow you to out-source some of your many tasks to CAPACCIO, who can assist you in accomplishing your environmental compliance and management goals. EHSMP services can complement existing staff and/or alleviate temporary or long-term workloads. Given our staff's knowledge and experience, EHSMP services can also provide added support and guidance in creating or implementing your environmental health and safety program. Outsourcing environmental, health and safety services allows you to utilize cost-effective, knowledgeable resources without the overhead costs.

In addition to the staff member assigned to assist you with implementing and managing your environmental, health and safety program activities, you have access to the extensive experience of the entire consulting firm available to you. You have a ready source of capable, experienced personnel committed to performing quality work.

The scope of the EHSMP services is defined by your specific needs. With it come tools and expertise to assist you in making your environmental, health and safety program the best it can be.

Our environmental, health and safety management program services offer:

- Experienced environmental and safety staff
- A flexible approach
- Hands-on assistance

Supplement Existing Environmental Staff with a Service Similar to Other Site Contracts

In order to keep total costs down, many companies outsource several facilities/site related services such as security, cafeteria, cleaning services, grounds maintenance and administrative services. Environmental, health and safety services can also be outsourced in this way with significant benefits to your company. You can have the extensive expertise of an entire consulting firm available to you. Yet, you still have an individual, experienced environmental specialist responsible for managing and implementing your environmental, health and safety program activities. You do not have to assign part-time duties to inexperienced personnel or hire additional personnel for your existing environmental, health and safety staff (with the associated overhead/benefits costs).

EHSMP services may include:

- Regularly scheduled site visits
- Environmental, health and safety management system documentation
- Hazardous waste manifest, chemical inventory, and MSDS record management systems
- EHS training
- Facility compliance calendar
- Facility permit summary and action list
- Continuous assessment of impact of new regulations on your facility
- On-call Licensed Site Professional (LSP) services in case of spills
- Assistance with existing environmental, health and safety management staff with implementation programs

Seasoned Staff with Industrial Experience

Our EHSMP staff have experience working in industry such as printing, metal finishing, electronics, semiconductors, biotech, pharmaceuticals, printed circuit boards, sports and athletic equipment, and food and kindred products, as environmental, health and safety managers and facilities personnel. They understand the regulatory obstacles you face, and the day-to-day hurdles involved in making your manufacturing operation a success.
